THE · CROSS.

O, beautious cross,
How wonderous is the story
Which thou dost tell to man
Of a world lost,
And then, by love unknown
Before, redeemed again.

One so sublime,
Earth ne'er before in all
Her mighty course beheld
One so divine,
And ne'er again of her
Such honor shall be told.

For heaven to bow
And place a kiss upon
Her face so sweet and fair
Upon her brow
Flowers of richest hue
And fragrance sweet and rare.

O crown of thorns,
Thou did'st mar the noblest
Brow earth will ever know,
O sorrow, tried
By Him who hung upon
The tree and bore our woe.

For us He died,
For this I weep and tears
My eyelids overflow;
And I would hide
Close at thy foot and in
The shadow thou dost throw.
